The Birth of an Icon

The Jeep Wagoneer is one of the most iconic vehicles in American automotive history. It was the first SUV to combine rugged off-road capability with luxury and comfort, and it quickly became a favorite of celebrities, politicians, and outdoor enthusiasts alike.

The Wagoneer's story begins in the early 1960s, when Kaiser Jeep was looking for a way to expand its product line. The company had been successful with its military vehicles, but it wanted to break into the growing civilian SUV market.

Kaiser Jeep's engineers started with the Jeep Gladiator, a pickup truck that was based on the military Jeep CJ-5. They stretched the Gladiator's frame and added a new body that was designed by Brooks Stevens, a renowned industrial designer. The result was a vehicle that was both rugged and stylish.

The Wagoneer was an immediate success. It was praised for its spacious interior, comfortable ride, and powerful V8 engine. It was also one of the first SUVs to offer four-wheel drive, which made it ideal for off-road adventures.

The Wagoneer quickly became a favorite of celebrities and politicians. President Lyndon Johnson was a fan of the Wagoneer, and he often used it for his off-road excursions. The Wagoneer was also popular with outdoor enthusiasts, who appreciated its ruggedness and versatility.

In 1970, Kaiser Jeep was acquired by American Motors Corporation (AMC). AMC continued to produce the Wagoneer, and it eventually became one of the company's most popular models. The Wagoneer remained in production until 1991, when it was replaced by the Jeep Grand Cherokee.
