3. The Ritual of the Seventh Sigil

The ritual of the Seventh Sigil is a dangerous and complex undertaking. It should only be attempted by experienced occultists who are prepared to face the consequences.

The ritual is performed in a circle of power, which is a sacred space that has been consecrated for the purpose of magic. The circle is typically drawn on the floor with chalk or paint, and it is often decorated with symbols and incantations.

The ritual begins with the invocation of the Archangels, who are the guardians of the Seventh Sigil. The Archangels are invoked by their names and by their powers. They are asked to protect the magician and to grant him or her the power to use the Seventh Sigil safely.

Once the Archangels have been invoked, the magician begins to draw the Seventh Sigil. The Sigil is drawn on a piece of parchment or on a metal plate. It is drawn with a special pen or stylus that has been consecrated for the purpose of magic.

As the magician draws the Sigil, he or she must concentrate on the power of the Sigil and on the purpose for which it is being used. The magician must also be careful not to make any mistakes when drawing the Sigil, as any mistakes could render the Sigil useless.

Once the Sigil has been drawn, the magician must activate it. The Sigil is activated by chanting a special incantation. The incantation is chanted in a loud and clear voice.

As the magician chants the incantation, he or she must visualize the power of the Sigil flowing into the Sigil. The magician must also feel the power of the Sigil flowing through his or her body.

Once the Sigil has been activated, the magician can use it to cast spells. The Sigil can be used to cast spells for any purpose, but it is most commonly used to cast spells for protection, power, and wealth.
