They perform daring feats of strength and agility, such as jumping through hoops, balancing on tightropes, and flying through the air on trapezes. Acrobats train for many years to perfect their skills, and they must have a great deal of strength, coordination, and balance.

The Jugglers

Jugglers are another popular type of circus performer. They keep multiple objects in the air at once, using their hands, feet, and even their heads. Jugglers must have excellent hand-eye coordination and timing. They also need to be able to concentrate and focus, even when there is a lot of noise and excitement around them.
