There is something about the unknown that is both terrifying and exhilarating. It is the thrill of the chase, the hope of discovery, and the satisfaction of finally solving a puzzle. Unsolved mysteries offer us a chance to test our wits, to exercise our curiosity, and to make sense of a world that often seems chaotic and unpredictable.

Some people are drawn to unsolved mysteries because they offer a sense of purpose. In a world that can often feel overwhelming and meaningless, solving a mystery can give us a feeling of accomplishment and satisfaction. It can make us feel like we are making a difference, even if it is just a small one.

Others are drawn to unsolved mysteries because they provide a sense of escape. They allow us to step outside of our everyday lives and enter a world of intrigue and suspense. We can become armchair detectives, solving crimes from the comfort of our own homes.

Jim Balfour's descent into obsession

Jim Balfour's obsession with the unsolved murders on the PGA Tour began innocently enough. As a former player, he was intrigued by the mystery and wanted to help find the killer. But as he delved deeper into the case, his obsession grew.
